Most of the 23 wheelchairs, 2 walkers, one pair of crutches and one pair of walking canes delivered free of charge were for policemen in passive duty who served the country for over 25 years.

wheelchair due to kidney failure, diabetes and other illnesses which make his legs unable to bear his weight. “With this chair my family will feel relief when moving me to the dialysis center I attend three times a week” he commented.

Like his, various stories came together in a moving performance by main authorities such as commander Tanya Varella who singled out her gratefulness to la Junta de Beneficencia for this donation to those who have extended their services to society. “At present we will continue the work so that you can improve your quality of life” she pointed out referring to the beneficiaries.

Sgt. Ronald Garcia, a member of the Unit of attention to disabled policemen spoke on behalf of beneficiaries. His emotive words of gratefulness ended with the phrase “For many this help will only be a wheelchair or a walking cane but for those of us stricken with disability it represents our limbs, our independence and the opportunity of a better quality of life”.
