

Rosario Sánchez, 36 weeks pregnant, was one of the first patients who came today from the Cisne 2 sector, for consultation in Gyneco Obstetrics at the Paulson Specialties Hospital of Junta de Beneficencia de Guayaquil.

She and her mother were pleased to know that she could deliver her baby in this hospital where she feels safe since she has risks of pre-eclampsia. "The truth is that this was good news for me because in other hospitals it was difficult for me due to the fact that my pregnancy is of high risk and I did not feel safe," she said after an echo performed to listen to the heartbeat of her baby.

Like Rosario, there were several patients, some pregnant and others for a gynecological consultation, who came from different sectors of the city in search of care.
